

NEW
Neil Griffiths
training opportunity

Back to basics!

Putting the child first!

This new thought-provoking course is designed for both experienced and newly-trained practitioners, across all key stages.

Created in response to the need to return to the fundamentals of working with children, this half-day session has the potential to change your practice dramatically for the good of the child.

At a time when the needs of children are often lost amongst excessive paperwork, this highly practical and realistic course will focus upon:

- Why we educate children
- Establishing effective relationships and understanding the needs of children

- Classroom management
- Creating an appropriate curriculum
- Making experiences memorable and relevant

The workshop will be led by Neil Griffiths, a former literacy project director and headteacher. He is renowned for his work with Storysacks and as an author and is currently lecturing worldwide.

Don't miss this opportunity to attend one of his highly informative, practical and highly entertaining sessions.

"This course takes us back to why we went into education in the first place." Headteacher, Cardiff

"Everyone working in a setting should attend this course!" Teacher, Worcester
